A Card.

A Clergyman, while residing in South America, as missionary, discovered a safe and simple remedy for the cure of Nervous Weakness. Early Decay, Discase of the Urinary and Sominal Organs, and the whole train of disorders brought on by baneful and vicious habits. Great numbers have been cured by this noble remedy. Prompted by a desire to benefit the afflicted and unfortunate, I will send the recipe for preparing and using this medicine, in a senied envelope, to any one who needs it. Free of Charge.

THE MARQUIS DE NOAILLES, the new French Minister, now en route to Washington, and taking New York in by way of the Brevoort House, is described by a newspaper man as "tal and spare in form. He wears a full beard of reddish hue; his hair, it is unnecessary to say, is of a like color. His face denotes good nature, and has the sleepy and studious look of a savant His dress is as simple and unpretentious as hi manner." Minute, but hardly complimentary The Marquis is the second son of the Duke o that name, and was born in 1830 at the Chateau de Maintenon. His great granduncle—a Mar quis de Noailles—was a brother-in-law of La fayette, and took part with him in the Ameri can war of independence. The new French Minister is also a descendant from the celebrated Mme. de Maintenon. He has written a histori cal work in three volumes, entitled "Henri III et la Prologne en 1592," besides many pamphlet and literary contributions to magazines and rewspapers.

ARRIVAL OF SPOTTED TAIL AND HIS DELE GATION .- Spotted Tail, chief of the Brule Sioux, accompanied by D. R. Risley, agent for that tribe, Messrs. Jules Ecoffe, Chas. E. Gueri and Todd Randall, who are connected with the White River agency; Iron Shell, Swift Bear and Two Strike, subordinate chiefs, and sixteen of the prominent young men of the Brule-Sioux nation, arrived in town this morning, and took up their quarters at the Washington House. On the 10th of June he proceeded to Yeddo with the Colorado and Benicia, and on the 14th had an audience with His Majesty the Ternno, at the Imperial Palace. His Majesty expressed himself pleased with the accounts received from his embassy now in America, and especially referred to their reports received from his embassy now in America, and especially referred to their reports upon the United States navy-yards visited by them. Admiral Jenkins further states that it was his intention to sail in a few days for Hakodadi. Gen. Capron, commissioner of agriculture in Japan, being about to proceed to that place upon-duties connected with his office, had been invited to take passage on the Colorado. The admiral was to remain but a few days at Hakodadi and then return to Yakohama, from whence he would sail for Kobe and Nagaski. The "Benecia" was to sail for San Francisco about the 4th of July under orders received from the department. Commander Kimberly, of the Benecia, had received orders to report to the commandant at the Mare Island yard for further arders. The Alaska was at Shanghai, having been to Kobe and Nagasaki, and was to sail soon for Nieuchwang, at the head of Lian Tung snif, in the morthern part of China, near the Corean boundary. He was to be in Chefoo about the 1st of September. The Achuelot was engaged in surveys in the vicinity of Kobe. The Monocacy was about to sail from Shanghai for Nagasaki. The Saco reached Shanghai on the6th of May from Amoy. The Palos was also at Shanghai, and the Iroquis had passed through the Suez canal on her way to Singapore, and from there she was to sail for Bankok Siam. TOWARD SUNSET.

VIII.

The people of California have as a general thing been pretty busy since the settlement of their state in gold-digging grain-raising and money-getting, in one way and another; but they have nevertheless found time to do a good deal toward developing and patronizing watering places, mineral springs and other places of fashionable resort. And in California, as in the eastern states, it is considered the stylish and necessary thing to leave the city during the summer season. It must, however, be understood by the reader that the rules which govern in relation to summer resorts on the Atlantic side are all reversed on the sunset slope, or so far, at least, as San Francisco and its immediate surroundings are concerned. In the east fashionables and invalids go to the mountains, the sea side, or the medicinal springs, as the case may be, to find a cooler temperature in connection with saline breezes or healing waters. Here, they leave the city during July and August to escape the cold: to find, as they will tell you, a little sunshine to bask in, rather than because they need sea air or medicated beverages. For it is always to be remembered that no true Californian will for a moment, no, not even inferentially, admit that the state in general or any particular part of it is not the chosen and peculiar abode of the Genius of Health. The anathemas of the Society of Pioneers and the jeers and hisses of infuriated editors would be upon him it he did, and after that he would never be able to hold up his head in decent society again. Still. an occasional ray of warm sunshine and a brief escape from raw gales is a pleasant thing of itself; and, besides, perspiration may possibly help the action of the liver and thus serve to kill off the germs of disease contracted elsewhere. Any way, the people of San Francisco get off to these places as often as they conveniently can, and stay as long as possible. Just why the people of the hot interior towns and valleys of ever lasting sunshine do the same thing, I am unable to explain. I presume, however, it is because that is considered the thing to do in the city, and so the country follows suit, as it is very apt to do everywhere, without much regard for the unities of the situation.

Curiously enough, too, there is a real or fancied resemblance between the leading places of resort in California and those in the eastern states. Thus, Santa Cruz is considered the Newport of the Pacific. Calistoga is regarded as corresponding to Saratoga; indeed I am not sure but its name is designed in some way to signify the Saratoga of California, as it cer-tainly would were the superfluous letters drop-ped from the middle. A trip up the Columbia river is a fair set off to a sail down the St Lawrence, while a visit to the Sierra Nevadas equals lakes are more than a match for Lake George. save in the important requisite of hotel accommodations. [And I will be excused for injecting just here the remark that while the hotels of San Francisco are excellent, those of the country are as a rule simply execrable.] Then, too. the White Sulphur Springs of the Napa valley are backed against those of Virginia. The Geyser combination is reckoned equal to the attractions of half a dozen single places of resort in the states, the Hot Springs of Arkansas thrown in, while for nearly all the minor springs on that side there are corrected to the states. side there are corresponding localities here. To be sure, there is nothing on the Pacific coast answering to the Falls of Niagara or a trip up Lake Superior; but on the other hand there is nothing like the Yosemite Valley anywhere else in the world. And if she has no Natural Bridge, she has the Biggest Trees yet discovered on the face of the earth. So, on the whole, the account seems to be pretty evenly balanced. At any rate, California has nothing to fear from a comparison of her wonderful and attractive feature with those of any other section of equal extent in these respects she is certainly far more than a match for any single state in the Union, whe ther variety or quality of attractions be taken into account. Of all this you can easily be convinced, even if you have not the time and means requisite to make a general tour through the state,—that is, if you are content with heareay evidence. For the average Californian is not much given to hiding the lights of his state under a bushel. In fact he (and she as well) is apt to err a little or the other side. But this is not strange. He ha spent many years on this coast, without the facilities of cheap or speedy communication with the rest of the world. He has seen astonishing developments in growth and progress in th twenty-odd short years since he came here, with little or no opportunity for comparing them with those of other quarters. He therefore naturally contrasts his old home as he left it with his new home as it is now, and he is very apt to fall into been made on this side. It is consequently not strange that he should have grown somewhat provincial in tone, and a trifle boastful in his manner. Still, justice requires that it should be said of the true Californian that these extravagant ideas of supremacy are in the main toler. ably well sustained by a liberal and enterprising spirit in business affairs, and an open-hander and untiring hospitality in private life. This, think, must be the testimony of all or nearly all visitors to California. - Although not fairly coming within the cat-egory of places of resort, properly speaking, ye letter on that subject would not be complete without some mention of THE CLIFF HOUSE.

This noted local attraction is, as almost all readers know, situated about five miles due west of the city, on a high sheer rock, which overhangs and overlooks the broad and restless waters of the Pacific ocean. Its most interesting feature to strangers is the far-famed seal rocks, which lie a couple of hundred yards from the verandah, and upon which scores of immense seals or rather sea lions may be seen disporting themselves at almost all hours of the day. One is puzzled to know whether the nngainly motions and hoarse angry barkings of these hybrid creatures are more interesting or repulsive; but in some way considerable time is spent in watching them and discussing their characteristics. From the porch of the house the Farallone islands and light-house, situated about thirty miles westward, may be seen in very clear weather. This is extremely rare, however, and usually the heavy banks of fog shut in the range of vision only a few rods from the shore. Below the house which, by the way, is connected with the city by a most excellent road, a broad level beach extends southwardly for about two miles. Its firm bed affords an excellent drive at low tide, and the scene which it occasionally presents during the pleasant hours of morning and evening, before the cold wind rises and after it has died down, is lively and attractive in the highest degree. The proportion of good horses here is unusually large. Indeed. in this respect I think California is ahead of almost any state in the Union; but in point of stylish turn-outs San Francisco can hardly compare with most cities of her size in the east. The open carriages and buggies peculiar to this st have, however, a decidedly nobby, dashing appearance, and as nearly everybody drives well or sits a horse gracefully, the beach often makes a show which will compare favorably with the Soldiers' Home at Washington or even the Central Park in New York. Fast driving is the rule here, and what they lack in showy equipages and stately demeanor they make up-in spirit and speed. The hotel also has a knack of getting up excellent beefsteaks, and it-quite the thing for Friscans to take their friend-out to it for a morning drive and enjoyment of its table and out-door attractions among the first things after arrival, as a sort of watering-place cocktail or appetizer to prepare the way for more extensive and attractive features yet to come.

From its proximity to the city and the consequent throng of people often congregated at the Cliff House, it happens that the tax upon it larder and corps of attendants is so great that one is not always certain of "the best the market affords, served in the most attractive style." At all events, its nearness to the city makes it somewhat common. Hence it is that when the hospitable and stylish 'Friscan wants to do special honor to a guest or to be perfectly sure of choice viands suitably served, either for friend or family, he provides himself with a reliable and active pair of horses and turns their heads towards

This'is a quiet way-side hostelrie, about four-teen miles from the city, just beyond San Thorpe's.

The recent annual Protestant Episcopa Convention voted Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, a leave of absence for foreign travel, and made provision to supply his place while absent.

reached by a smooth well graded road which winds along the west side of the bay and gives one a pleasant land-Summering on the Western Coast. scape view of smiling and abrupt hills on the right, with the attractive features of a broad expanse of water and a hazy range o mountains in the distance on the left. Why the place is called Thorpe's I do not know, unless it is because it is kept by a worthy and attentive German couple named Mangenberg. Mr. M of the firm, attends to the bibulous and the Madam to the solid wants of the inner man. and between them they seem to have very successfully solved the great American problem of knowing how to keep a hotel. The specialties of Thorpe's are flowers and Hamburg steak Other tempting dishes and compounds are. however, not lacking. The place was, I believe, formerly the country residence of a wealthy gentleman who had both the means and sheltered locality necessary for the gratification of a taste for flowers, and the display in this respect is at once astonishing and attractive to the last extreme. I have not space for a catalogue of the rare and beautiful plants which flourish here in rich profusion and almost endless variety. I may, however, be pardoned for mentioning lemon verbena trees ten feet high, a hedge row nearly six feet high of choice geraniums in full bloom, rose trees nearly as large as one's ankle, fuschia and heliotrope bushes with trunks hardly less in size, and Cloth of Gold and Le Marc roses nearly as big as coffee saucers. These are among the beautiful floral attractions which challenge the admiration and almost surpass the imagination of the visitor. As for the Hamburg steak, that is a long way beyond my powers of description. But its tempting incense still gratifies the sense of smell, and the memories of its juicy tenderness and delicious flavor will long live to tickle the palate and swaken pleasant associations. How it is prepared I know not, nor whether the secret of its compounding is to die with its present possessor. I can only say, happy are they who find themselves behind a spanking pair of horses, in congenial company, and well wrapped up, (furs, robes and blankets enter largely into the question of control of the symmetric confort have) on their were out-door summer comfort here) on their way homeward after a breakfast at Thorpe's! The morning that sees this culminating of earthly happiness is sure to begin a red-letter day in their calendar. Beyond the flowers and the breakfast, there is little to interest the visitor at the hotel. About a dozen miles further along, however, in a couple of lakes nestling among the hills on the outer coast range, most excellent trout fishing is to be had. Anxious to escape the noise and confusion of independence day, a party of four of us concluded to try our luck there with the rod and line on that occasion, but our success was only moderate. One cannot, however, expect to do much at trout-fishing where they have to wear two overcoats to keep from freezing to death on a 4th of July ride, as we did, and where the wind blows Yet, in spite of these great drawbacks, our basket was graced by the presence of seventeen speckled beauties, varying from six to fourteen inches in length, which proved to be as satisfying to the appetite as they were attractive to the eye. And as a matter of course, the sensation of pulling them out is a still more pleasant experience than either seeing or tasting them The road leading to these lakes is an exceeding-ly hilly one, but it is well graded and kept remarkably smooth, considering the ragged surface of the country through which it runs. It is, withal, one of the most beautiful and picturesque carriage ways to be seen any where. Indeed, a ride over it is of itself well worth the taking, even without the crowning attraction of trout-fishing at the end. But I have lingered so long in the pleasant

Political Notes.

The democrats of Missouri hold a state convention at Jefferson City, August 21st, to nominate a state ticket. Mr. George F. Hoar, of the Worcester (Mass.

listrict, has withdrawn his determination not to oe re-elected to Congress, The Georgia democrats do not mix readily with the Greeley republicans, and talk of separate tickets and a fight on the straight democratic platform.

The New Yorker (democrat) and the Aband Zeilung, of New York, have come out for Grant and Wilson. They have hitherto been liberal republicans, but anti-Greeley. Senator Sumner will, it is said, shortly reply to the strong letter recently written to him by Frederick Douglass, appealing to him to stand by the republican party, and not to do anything that will aid in the election of Horace Greeley. The following are the latest nominations to Congressmen :- A. R. Cotton, republican, of the 2d district of Iowa, for re-election; Major H. B. Strait, republican, 2d Minnesota; E. A. Standiford, democrat, 5th Kentucky; H. S. Bundy, republican, 11th Ohio. If we are to believe the organs, and of course we must, we shall have two Presidents, two Congressmen from nearly all the districts, and two Governors in nearly all the states, as the result of this canvass. At any rate, both parties are "sure" of carrying most of the states by from ten to one hundred thousand It is reported that Hon. John A. Peters will not consent to be a candidate for re-election to Congress from the Bangor (Maine) district, which he has represented for the last three terms, owing to the pressure of private business. He will, however, give his support to the republican ticket, and take the stump for Grant and Wilson.

At a democratic meeting in Indianapolis on Saturday evening, Hon. T. A. Hendricks made a speech, in which he not only eats crow, but seems to give t the preference over canvass back duck. He closed his speech with the following conundrum:—" Now that the amendments have been declared adopted, is it humiliation on my part to cease that controversy, to turn my back upon it, and to declare that the amendments must be respected and obeyed ?"

EDITH O'GORMAN IN THE POLICE COURT .-A dispatch to the Associated Press from San Francisco, July 19th, says:- The case of Edith O'Gorman, "the escaped nun," and her husband, Professor Auffrey, and the private detective officers Thomas Ausbro, and Smith, alias Allis, which has created much feeling here lately, terminated in the police court to-day. Edith and her husband caused the arrest of Ausbro for libel in publishing a statement that she was seen drunk on the streets, and that she bought whisky at two o'clock in the morning, etc. Ausbro, in return, caused the arrest of Professor Auffrey, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Smith, the detective, then swore to the assault, and to destroy the testimony of Edith and Auffrey, testified that he knew both of them in Australia; that she was woman of doubtful character and he a noted sneak thief and forger. After a full hearing of the case, Judge Lodderback discharged Auf-fery, committed Ausbro for trial for libel, and rdered Smith, alias Allis, into custody for per-THE COMING O'BALDWIN-MACE FIGHT .- Th
